Featherston Military Training Camp and the First World War, 1915-27

by Tim Shoebridge

This new book from Manatū Taonga/Ministry for Culture and Heritage traces the history of the Featherston Military Training Camp in the First World War. Between 1916 and 1918, 60,000 men trained for combat on the western front in the countryside around Featherston. It was one of the largest and most important military camps in New Zealand's history, and the largest town in the Wairarapa during its heyday.
